Mr. William Grayson, a delegate from the State of Virginia, attended, and produced credentials, by which it appears that on the 22nd of June, 1784, he was elected to serve in Congress for one year, to commence the first Monday in November next ensuing the date of his appointment. 57 The question of disposing of lands in the Western territory was occupying the attention of Congress to a large extent when Grayson became a member of that body. On April 14, 1785, a committee composed of a delegate from each State, of which Grayson was a member, reported An ordinance for ascertaining the mode of disposing of lands in the western territory. 58 At this time Virginia and Massachusetts both had ceded their claims to the Union, the formal vote of Congress in accepting the former being taken on March 1, 1784, and that of the latter, April 19, 1785.³⁹ The ordinance of 1785, drawn chiefly by Colonel Grayson,⁶⁰ provided for the disposing of the western lands north of the Ohio. Before the end of 1786 most of the States had fulfilled their promise to cede their western claims to the Union, with the understanding that when the vast Western region was settled it should be divided into States and admitted into the Union. An ordinance of 1784, which provided for (1) the division of the Western territory into fourteen or sixteen counties, (2) a complete system of laws to be enforced until...
