Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Lectures on Fire Insurance: Seasons of 1914 1915 1916 This subject is, as you all realize, a broad and technical one. I shall attempt, in the short time available, to discuss briefly only those features which have a more or less direct bearing on fire protection. Preliminary to a consideration of the water works proper, it is usual to make some investigation of the organization and maintenance of the works. A great majority of the water supply systems are owned by the municipality, and the general tendency is towards an increase of municipal ownership. As a general proposition, better fire protection is likely to be furnished by municipal owned works than by privately owned, although we have examples of private ownership rendering service comparing very favorably with the best municipally owned works. Many of these plants are operated with a high degree of efficiency and with the idea that the best way to forestall municipal ownership is to render reliable and efficient service. The best municipally owned plants are found to be under the control of trained executives and with employees appointed under properly administered civil service rules and secure tenure of office. An indication of good management is found in proper records and plans of physical structures and the operation of the system, since only by the keeping of such records and a study of them from year to year, and by comparison with similar works in other cities, are the best results to be obtained. Most modern water works have one or more emergency crews, provided with emergency wagons loaded with the tools necessary for prompt action in case of a break in...
